FOCUS

A space for a specific task.
Fixed furniture.

Quiet areas, with optimised soundproofing allowing for full concentration on a task. Small "shelters" for focus that we can use freely and independently for working on a document or simply for a quiet moment alone.

COLLABORATION

Visual contact.

Pleasant, spacious, bright, and well-equipped spaces that boost communication so workers can carry out their work independently, individually, or in a team.

SOCIALIZATION

Multi-use space.

Spaces that motivate.

A well-designed space must boost links and creative meetings for the spread of ideas between people. Spaces that boost social bonds through meeting areas, canteens, etc. where we can unleash creativity and let off steam.

Multi-use space.
Flexible furniture.
Participatory spaces.

Flexible, modular areas that can be adapted to changing needs with high connectivity to boost the participation of those not physically present. Light yet durable, long-lasting, and easily stackable furniture that can be adapted to the different tasks at hand.

LEARNING

The design of spaces today must take into account the privacy needs of organisations by providing solutions such as rooms for private meetings, phone booths for calls and videoconferences, and furniture that ensures confidentiality.

CONFIDENCIALITY

Isolated spaces.
Fixed or flexible furniture.
Soundproofing.
